“Build a company that runs without you.”

Part 1: How to Make an Organizational Chart (Step-by-Step)

1. Define your company vision.

My company, Ihsan Souvenirs, will sell eco-friendly, culturally inspired travel souvenirs (keychains, magnets, mini monuments) in 10+ countries.

2. List all business functions.

Design, sourcing, production, quality control, inventory, sales, marketing, e-commerce, finance, HR, logistics.

3. Group functions into departments.

Design → Creative Dept.

Production + Quality → Operations

Sales + Marketing → Sales & Marketing

Finance + HR → Admin & Finance

4. Add positions and hierarchy.

Start with CEO, then department heads, managers, and staff.

5. Draw reporting lines.

Use arrows: Staff → Manager → Head → CEO.

6. Plan for Year 10 growth.

Add future roles in orange dotted boxes.

7. Choose a tool.

I used Overleaf + TikZ for professional, scalable diagrams.

8. Ensure scalability.

In 10 years, the CEO and department heads run everything. I (Ihsan) will only be Chairman.

Tool Used: Overleaf (LaTeX with TikZ)

Part 2: Organizational Charts

Year 0 – Startup Phase (Ihsan = CEO, Hands-On)

Year 10 – Fully Functional (Ihsan = Chairman, Not in Daily Ops)

Part 3: Growth Plan – How It Runs Without Me in 10 Years

In 10 years, Ihsan Souvenirs will operate like a self-sustaining machine. A professional CEO will lead daily operations, reporting to the Board. Each department has a qualified Head with clear SOPs (Standard Operating Procedures). Automation tools manage inventory, CRM, and online sales. I (Ihsan) will attend only quarterly board meetings as Chairman, focusing on vision and expansion. Success = The company thrives when the founder steps back.
