Speaking: Part 3 — Advertising

1. Instructions for the student

- Read each question carefully and study the model answer.
- Learn the highlighted vocabulary (Turkish translations provided).
- Shadow the sample answer out loud 3 times (speak exactly after the recording or along with it).
- Record yourself answering each question (use your phone or computer). Send the recordings to your teacher as homework.
- Use the "Phrases when stuck" below if you need time to think.

2. Question 1

What are popular types of advertising in today's world?

There are many popular ways companies can choose to advertise. In today's world, the top three advertisement types are probably internet ads, TV ads, and signs. Internet ads are popular because they are cheap, highly effective, and can be targeted to customers based on their online habits. TV ads are still popular because, although more expensive, they reach a large number of viewers. Lastly, signs are useful because they can be placed in specific locations where potential customers are likely to see them, such as department stores.

Key vocabulary and Turkish translations:	Advertising	reklamcılık
	Internet ads	internet reklamları
	Targeted	hedeflenmiş
	Effective	etkili
	Signs / Billboards	afişler / reklam panoları
	Department store	büyük mağaza / mağazalar zinciri

Exercises to memorise (do these aloud):

1. Make 3 short sentences using the words: targeted, effective, signs. (Then translate each to Turkish.)
2. Quick gap-fill (say aloud): "Companies use _____ ads to reach customers based on their online _____." (Answers: targeted, habits)

Phrases when stuck:

- "That's an interesting question — I think..." — "Bu ilginç bir soru — bence..."
- "One reason is..." — "Bir neden..."

3. Question 2

What type of media advertising do you like most?

I prefer internet ads because the internet is the main media I use. I like that internet ads are often based on my browsing history, so they are more relevant to my interests. Also, they are easy to ignore or close when they appear, unlike TV commercials which can be loud and impossible to skip.

Key vocabulary and Turkish translations:

Browsing history	tarama geçmişi
Relevant	ilgi alanına uygun / ilgili
Ignore / Close	görmezden gelmek / kapatmak
Commercial / TV commercial	reklam (televizyon)
Subtle	ince / göze batmayan

Exercises to memorise:

1. Turn the phrase "browsing history" into a sentence: "My browsing history shows that I like..." then translate it.
2. Pronunciation drill: say relevant, subtle three times, then use them in a sentence.

Phrases when stuck:

- "I mainly use... so I prefer..." – "Ben genellikle ... kullanıyorum, bu yüzden tercih ederim..."
- "One example is..." – "Bir örnek..."

4. Question 3

Do you think advertising influences what people buy?

Yes, definitely. Advertising builds brands and creates awareness. When people constantly see a brand on TV or online, they are more likely to trust it and choose it. Advertising can also create desire for things people might not need. There is advertising everywhere, so it usually affects our choices even if we do not realise it.

Key vocabulary and Turkish translations:

Brand	marka
Awareness	farkındalık
Desire	istek
Constantly	sürekli olarak
Affect / Influence	etkilemek

Exercises to memorise:

1. Make a short opinion sentence using "brand" and "trust"; translate it to Turkish.
2. Quick repetition: say "Advertising affects our choices" three times with emphasis on affects.

Phrases when stuck:

- "Generally speaking, I believe..." – "Genel olarak inanıyorum ki..."
- "There are a few reasons for that..." – "Bunun birkaç nedeni var..."

5. Question 4

What factors should be taken into account when making advertisements?

Advertisers should be responsible and ensure their ads are truthful and not harmful. They must avoid misleading claims (for example, saying unhealthy fast food is "healthy"). Instead, they can focus on honest selling points like taste or convenience. Considering the audience and cultural context is also important.

Key vocabulary and Turkish translations:

Responsible	sorumlu
Truthful / Truthful information	gerçekçi / doğru bilgi
Misleading	yanıltıcı
Audience	hedef kitle
Cultural context	kültürel bağlam

Exercises to memorise:

1. Replace the word "misleading" in this sentence: "Ads should not be misleading." Make a Turkish translation.
2. Situation practice: imagine a fast food ad. Say two honest selling points aloud (taste, price, convenience).

Phrases when stuck:

- "An important factor is..." – "Önemli bir faktör..."
- "They should avoid..." – "Kaçınmalar..."

6. Question 5

Is advertising really necessary in modern society?

Advertising can be useful because it helps people learn about many options. But it is not always "necessary" — it can push consumerism and encourage buying things people do not need. Personally, I think people should research important purchases themselves instead of relying only on ads.

Key vocabulary and Turkish translations:

Necessary	gerekli
Consumerism	tüketim toplumu / tüketicilik
Purchase	satın alma
Personally	kişisel olarak
Research	araştırma

Exercises to memorise:

1. Make one sentence: "Advertising is useful, but..." then translate it.
2. Debate mini-task (speak 30 seconds): argue for or against the necessity of advertising.

Phrases when stuck:

- "I am not sure, but I think..." – "Emin değilim, ama sanırım..."
- "On the one hand... on the other hand..." – "Bir yandan... diğer yandan..."

7. Question 6

How does advertising influence children?

Advertising influences children by creating unrealistic expectations and by exaggerating product effects. Children may try to copy images they see in ads or expect certain products to make them happier or more popular. This can affect their self-image and the decisions they ask parents to make.

Key vocabulary and Turkish translations:	Unrealistic	gerçekçi olmayan
	Exaggerate	abartmak
	Self-image	benlik algısı
	Impressionable	etkilenmeye açık
	Copy / Imitate	kopyalamak / taklit etmek

Exercises to memorise:

1. Give one example of how an ad might exaggerate an effect (say it and translate it).
2. Role play: act as a child asking for a toy you saw in an ad (30 seconds).

Phrases when stuck:

- "Children often..." – "Çocuklar sık sık..."
- "This can lead to..." – "Bu yol açabilir..."

8. Question 7

Is there any advertising that can be harmful to children?

Yes. Ads for sugary or fatty foods can encourage unhealthy eating. Also, ads that promote unrealistic beauty standards can damage children's self-esteem. Advertisers should avoid these harmful messages and be mindful of children's vulnerability.

Key vocabulary and Turkish translations:	Sugary / Sugar	şekerli / şeker
	Fatty / Fat	yağlı / yağ
	Self-esteem	özsaygı
	Vulnerability	savunmasızlık
	Avoid	kaçınmak

Exercises to memorise:

1. Make two sentences: one about food ads, one about beauty ads, then translate them.
2. Quick repeat: say "Advertising can be harmful to children" three times with clear pronunciation.

Shadowing Homework Instructions

1. For each question: read the vocabulary, shadow the sample answer 3 times (speak aloud). Try to match pronunciation, rhythm and intonation.
2. Record yourself answering each question (6–8 sentences each). Aim for clear pronunciation, natural speed, and correct use of vocabulary.
3. File format: MP3 or M4A. Label files: "Q1_{Name}.mp3", "Q2_{Name}.mp3", etc.
3. Submit all recordings to your teacher (via WhatsApp/Google Drive/Email) before the deadline.

Good luck! If you want, I can shorten the answers for faster practice or create a script for your phone to record directly.
